In giving the highest losses suffered by individual bodies of troops in recent hattles Captain Berndt states that at the battle of Gravelotte-St. Privat the Fourth Infantry Brigade of the Guards (Prussian) lost 42 per cent. of its fighting force, the sharpshooters' battallon losing 4 per cent. of its men and all of its officers. At Plevna the Vladimir regiment lost fourteen out of its fifteen company commanders, and the 117th Infantry was reduced to 51 per cent. of its fighting force. The troops of the left wing, under the famous Skobeleff, lost 48 per cent., and individual companies as high as 60 to 75 per cent. each.

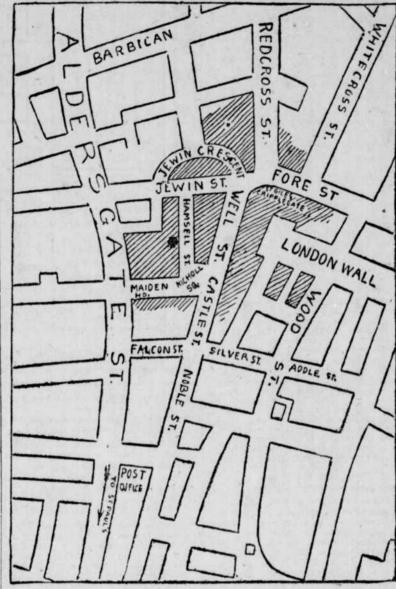

LONDON, November 20.—It is impossible to accurately estimate the damage done by the great conflagration yesterday, but the direct loss will probably be below $10,000,000.

Consols and India 3 per cents. have fallen heavily on the belief that the losses will necessitate heavy sales by insurance companies, and most of the direct loss of the century 1750 to 1850. Only a few of the figures are reproduced. At Kolin, 1757, the Austrians lost 15.2 per cent., or $1.00 in 55,500; the Prussians 33.6, or 12.080 in 36,000. At Leuthen, 1757, the Austrians lost 37.2 per cent., or 26,820 in 72,000; the Prussians 144, or 6,200 in 43,000. At Kunnersdorf, 1759, the Prussians and Austrians lost 22.1 per cent., or 15,700 in 71,000; the Prussians 48.2, or 20,720 in 42,000. At Marengo Napoleon lost 20 per cent., insurance companies, and most of the insurance companies' shares have dropped 10 to 30 shillings.

Paul's alley, and Red Cross street. The insurance agents take an optimistic view of their losses, their estimates ranging from £1,500,000 to £4,000,000. It is a fact that dozens of burned-out firms were not insured, in some cases because they were considered to be undesirable customers, and in others because the locality has long been considered dangerous by the insurance companies. The latter assert that the sensational rumors regarding the losses have been promoted on the stock exchange in order to influence stocks. All the historic treasures of Cripple-

GIANT WAR FIGURES.

Losses of the Troops of Past Generations and To-Day.

(New York Sun.)

Captain Otto Berndt, of the Austro Hungarian Grand General Staff, has published a large volume on "Warfare in Figures." In it he has reduced to percentages a vast amount of information, which long has been the subject of inexact statement, or mere guesswork, such as the percentage losses in wars, battles, and in sieges, the proportion of losses to the number of batteries in action, and the average losses of armies of different lands fighting under similar circumstances. All these figures concern only the wars of Europe. The great rebellion in this country, and the Mexican and the Chinese-Japanese war are left out of con-

First, Captain Berndt considers the rel-ative periods of war and peace among the nations of Europe. His data go back to 1800, and cover the years up to last January 1st. Turkey has the record of the most warlike nation. She has had 37 years of war and 59 of peace since the beginning of the century. Spain comes next with 31 years of war to 65 of peace; then comes France with 27 years of war and 69 of peace; Russia, with a record of 24 years of war, and 72 of peace; Italy, with 23 years of war, and 73 of peace; Engwith 23 years of war, and 73 of peace; Eng-gland, with a corresponding record of Il and 75; Austro-Hungary, with one of Il and 75; the Netherlands, with one of 14 and 82; Germany, exclusive of Prussia, with one of 13 and 83; Prussia, with one of 12 and 84; Portugal, with one of 12 and 34; Sweden, with one of 10 and 85, and Denmark, with one of 9 and 87. There was peace for European Powers in the was peace for European Powers in the periods of 1816-18, 1841-47, 1879-181, and 1886, up to the war between Turkey and Greece. Consequently, in the recent times of enormous armaments, Europe has enjoyed the longest tranquil period of the century.

Here are some of Captain Berndt's statements of losses in the great battles of recent times; Koeniggraets, 220,982

Prussians against 215,124 Austrians and Prussians against 215,124 Austrians cent.; Austrian and Saxon loss, 44,313, or more than 20 per cent. Woerth, 82,100 (Germans against 48,600 French; German loss, 10,600, or 14 per cent.; French loss, 5,740, or 14 per cent. Spicern, 24,700 (Germans against 27,000 French; German loss, 5,740, or 14 per cent.; French loss, 10,600 or 14.8 per cent.; French loss, 10,600 Germans against 113,500 French; German loss, 4,810 or 14.9 per cent.; French loss, 15,800, or 14.9 per cent.; French loss, Saxons; Prussian loss, 9,172, or 4.2 per cent.; Austrian and Saxon loss, 44,313, or injured during the work of extinguish- | 000, and the allies 17.8 per cent., or 53,800 in 301,500

Captain Berndt concludes that, with some allowances, the losses of an army offices.

The official report says the cause of and fighting power as shown in the field. and hence that the armies of recent The bloodlest battles of modern history, he records, were Leipzic, where the total loss was 113,000, and Aspern, where it was nearly 68,000. A conclusion equally uncomplimentary with the acove to modern warriors is drawn by Captain Berndt from his figures regarding the losses of generals on the battle-field. For instance, the generals killed on both sides at Kunnersdorf numbered 17; at Marengo, 11; at Aspern, 25; at Wagram, 35; at Borodino, 53; at Lepzio, (on the side of the allies), 21, and at Waterloo, 34. On the other hand, but 12 generals were lost at Magenta; 9 at Solferino: 13 at Koeniggraetz, and 10 on the German side at Woerth, Mars-la-Tour.

Captain Berndt next gives a compari-son, by wars, of the losses as they were long ago, and as they are under modern The table of total losses is Seven Years' war, 23.5 per cent.; Napoleonie wars, 19: Russo-Polish 18.5; Italian war (1848-'49), 5.5; Austro Hun-garian war (1848-'49), 4.5; Crimean war, 15; war in India (1859), 13.5; Austro-Prusian war of 1866, 12; Franco-Prussian war, ments are, however, uncommon enough to merit repetition. The cost of the war, he calculates, was $3,000,000,000. The Ger-man field artillery fired during it 240,000 shots, and the infantry 20,000,000. The booty of war consisted of 5,505 fortress guns, 1,915 field guns and rapid-firing-can-non, 107 eagles and flags, and 865,000 ri-fles, exclusive of what was captured at lesure on shandoned fields. The losses in killed and wounded differ considerably from the above total losse They are tabulated by Berndt so as to give the following results: Seven years' war, 17; Napoleonic wars, 15; Russo-Polish, 16; Italian of 1848-49, 3; Austro-Hungarian, 1.5; Crimean, 14; Italian of 1859, 8 Danish war of 1864, 8; Austro-Prussian, 8; Franco-Prussian, first period, 9.5; second

Numerically the greatest battles of me dern times were: Leipsic, with 472,000 men engaged; Koeniggraetz, with 436,000; Wagram, with 310,000; Gravelotte, with 300, 000; Dresden (1813), with 259,000; Solferino with 284,000; Bautzen (1813), with 259,000; Borodino (1812), with 251,000; Sedan, with 244,000; Waterloo, with 217,000; Lisaine (1870), with 185,000; Mars-la-Tour, with 176,000, and Aspern, with 165,000. In the chapters devoted to the consider ration of weapons and their efficiency, Captain Berndt remarks that, much as total losses in battle have differed in the battles of different periods, the number of killed and mortally wounded in battle seems to have remained almost stationary. Despite all advancement in the in-vention of firearms, the fire of the enemy in battle was not more deadly in the war of 1870-71 than in that of the dawn of the century. The proportion is one man dead to four men hit. The question then is: "How many shot hit?" Up to 1890 the figures showed that one shot out of wounded an enemy. At Gravelotte-St. Privat, however, but one shot out of 400 fired by the Saxon Corps struck a Frenchman, and at Mars-la-Tour it required 452 shots to wound one man. Captain Berndt agrees with other authoritain Bernat agrees with other action-ties, whom he quotes, that in the next great war not more than one shot in 400 will be effecive. Formerly soldiers fired less often but with more care; the small provement in actual warfare as has been taken for granted. The very ease with which it is handled and fired turns much drawn from Captain Berndt's figures and of which we give but the merest outline in this advertisement. is interesting. It gives some hints of under-values in DRESS GOODS, SILKS, Ladies' and Children's CLOAKS, SUITS, Etc.
